PHARMAXIS APPOINTS PORTUGUESE DISTRIBUTOR FOR ARIDOL

Pharmaxis (ASX:PXS, NASDAQ:PXSL) today announced the appointment of Pulmocor SA to market and distribute its asthma diagnostic tool, Aridol in Portugal.

"Portugal was one of the 13 European countries included in the successful mutual recognition procedure earlier this year," said Pharmaxis Chief Executive Officer Dr Alan Robertson.

"Bronchial challenge testing is a common procedure in Portuguese hospitals and we have sought a distributor that already has a strong franchise in this market and will provide the best support for Aridol; we are delighted to announce our agreement with Pulmocor."

Mr Ricardo Villar, President of Pulmocor said, "Founded in 1982, Pulmocor has a strong reputation for quality and excellence among respiratory specialists and brings many years of bronchial challenge testing experience to the promotion of Aridol. Pulmocor is currently extending its activity into specialist pharmaceutical products and Aridol represents an important addition to our portfolio and our ability to service respiratory specialists."

Aridol has already been approved in Europe by the mutual recognition procedure and is now awaiting confirmation of national approval in Portugal.

A simple to use airways inflammation test, Aridol is administered as a dry powder in a hand held inhaler. Doctors can use the results of this test to identify airway hyper-responsiveness – a hallmark of asthma.
